

© Ján Krcho

The family house in Žernošice, near Prague, which won the architects of the KSA studio the ARCH Award of 2008, has a lot in common with the newly built Košice house in the Žermel' valley. Both Žernošice and the Žermel' valley used to be favourite places where people built their summerhouses. Now they host exclusive residential houses. It was the meadow in the Žermel' project that caught the architects' eyes. In order to emphasize its presence, they designed two block houses at its lower and upper ends. The lower three-storied family house is built on columns. An extended decking connects it with the meadow that runs underneath the house into a parking place. A glass facade looks onto the meadow whilst a closed facade faces the street. The upper house is a sauna with a pool. Compared to the elaborate shape of the Žernošice house, the Žermel' one is assembled of primary geometric elements in a simple form and revived with well thought out details. Ján Krcho

House H

Suchodolinská ulica
Košice, Slovakia

ARCHITEKTUR

Ján Studený

David Kopecký

FERTIGSTELLUNG

2008

SAMMLUNG

Architekturarchiv Slowakei

PUBLIKATIONSdatum

03. Juni 2009

© Ján Krcho

© Ján Krcho

© Ján Krcho

House H

DATENBLATT

Architektur: Ján Studený, David Kopecký

Mitarbeit Architektur: Norbert Gáfrik, Kateřina Horáková

Funktion: Einfamilienhaus

Planung: 2000 - 2003

Ausführung: 2002 - 2008

Nutzfläche: 377 m<sup>2</sup>

PUBLIKATIONEN

KRCHO Ján: Dom a lúka. ARCH vol. 14, 2009, no. 2, p.26-31

© Ján Krcho

edium/1244028120.jpg

House H

